Eight rectangular aluminium trusses are suspended from the rigging system and controlled by the corresponding control panel.

The aluminium truss system features Trabes Euro 29 series, which provides the user with an unbelievable loading capacity and versatility.

The Cradle of Creativity

Run Run Shaw Creative Media Centre (CMC), the landmark building in the City University of Hong Kong, is a distinctive crystalline shaped, nine-storey complex designed by renowned architect Daniel Libeskind. The building houses the School of Creative Media, providing a stimulating environment and meeting point for professionals from around the world and for student-staff interactions, interdisciplinary collaborations and synergies with industry. One of the most important features in CMC is the Multimedia Theatre (MMT).

The MMT with a flexible staging and a capacity of 224 seating is well equipped with professional performance facilities on audio, video and lighting, and motions capture facilities. Over a hundred high power spotlights are equipped in MMT. They are removable and can be installed on every lighting bar. The eight rectangular aluminium trusses can be raised up or lowered down by their corresponding motorized durable winches. These lighting and truss systems together with the professional audio system allow any multimedia performances, 3D projections, recording with a studio audience, motion capture and professional shootings with flexible usage of lighting and splendid audio quality.
